VIEW OF THE PRESIDENT.

Washington, Nov. 11—Obstacles, at present insurmountable, still stand in the way of building an American canal by way of Panama, and the administration waits. Meantime Nicaragua looms up, not only as a possibility, but as the only route by which a waterway from the Atlantic to the Pacific can be built strictly according to the terms of the canal act.

The administration is not only finding difficulty in negotiating a treaty with Colombia, but it also has some trouble in finding a responsible government in Orotumba with which to negotiate. The government that has risen out of the insurrection has raised the price for a canal strip by $3,000,000, and at the same time hesitates to grant the perpetual control required by the act, and now seems bound to not concede sufficient jurisdiction to avoid all future complications.

In the meantime word comes to Washington, from a source of the highest authority, that the government of Costa Rica and Nicaragua stand ready to negotiate a treaty practically on the United States government's own terms.

Secretary Hay has conferred with several statesmen and diplomats on the subject of the canal within the last few days, and these conferences have disclosed the stubborn fact that neither the government of France nor the government of Colombia will give the United States a satisfactory guarantee, and furnish security to support a perfect title to the Panama canal property, for which the United States is required to pay $40,000,000.

Some of the ablest statesmen and diplomats in this country have studied carefully the report of Attorney General Knox, based upon a personal investigation in France, in which he declares his belief that the title to the Panama canal property is "good, valid and unencumbered." With due deference to the legal ability and the patriotism of the attorney general, there are good lawyers who assert that the United States should hesitate to expend $40,000,000, unless the terms of the act providing for the construction of the canal are strictly complied with. The law requires the canal company to furnish a "satisfactory title."

WAIVED EXAMINATION

BOUGHT THE WATERWORKS.

Covington, Nov. 11—The city this morning purchased the Covington waterworks, including the two lots owned by the company and the good will, for $14,720, $8,000 of which was paid cash, $2,120 is to be paid one year from today, $3,340 in two years from date and the balance, $2,360, three years from date.

DEATH IN MECHANICSBURG.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bradbury, aged 78, died at Clements street and Yeiser avenue today from dropsy. She was born in Gailatin county, Tenn., and came to Paducah in 1889. She leaves one child, Mrs. Davis, at whose home she died. No funeral arrangements have been made.

WOMAN'S WEALTH IS HEALTH

DELIGHTFUL COUNTRY

Paine's Celery Compound

GIVES VITALITY, VIGOR AND STRENGTH TO DEBILITATED AND RUN-DOWN WOMEN.

It is maintained by many distinguished writers that the greatness of a nation depends much upon the physical condition of its women. The general conditions which contribute to health and long life, are those which do not imply a rapid and unequal exhaustion of those powers by which life is maintained. While we assert that the women of our land stand poor, less for beauty and the virtues that make them lovable, we cannot hide the fact that there are thousands in our midst who, owing to overwork, worry, household cares, and an unequal exhaustion of life power, have become weak, nervous, sleepless and debilitated.

We bring to the attention of all weary, despondent, hopeless and sickly women earth's great resorer and health-builder, Paine's Celery Compound. Thousands of healthy women around us owe their present vigor, activity and robustness to Paine's Celery Compound. Mrs. Stephen Smith, St. Paul, Minn., tells how she was snatched from the grave; she says:

"I had a bad attack of la grippe this spring and was at death's door, and no one ever expected me to recover. I was so weak that as soon as they brought me out of one taint I was in another. I could not take any nourishment, and doctors' medicines did me no good. A friend advised my husband to get me a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound, which he did, but had no faith in it. The second day after taking the compound, I began to get a real hungry and took interest in things. I had everything that money and loving care could supply, and with that and Paine's Celery Compound, am now doing my own work, while three months ago I was almost in the grave. I know that I owe my health and strength to Paine's Celery Compound, and shall always recommend it."

There are many ways to economize, but none is so simple, entertaining, and satisfactory as the use of Officer Tom Orr Well Pleased With California, Where He Now Is.

He Likes Old Kentucky Better, However, and Will Be Home the 20th of Sooner.

HIS HEALTH MUCH IMPROVED

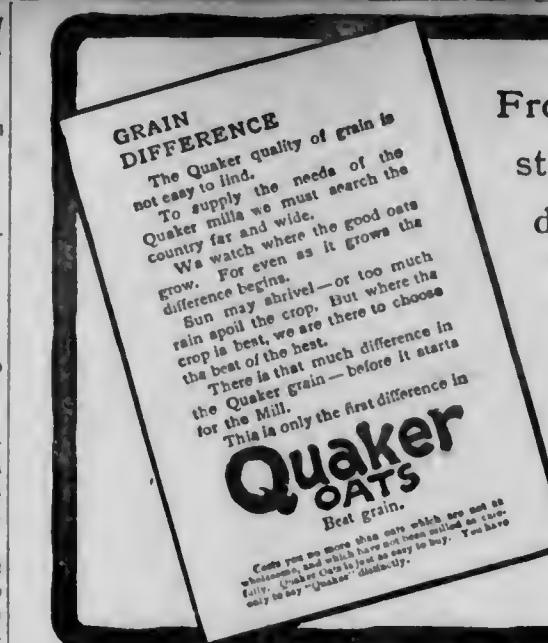

The following letter is from Officer Tom Orr who has been to California for his health, to a friend, and gives a fair idea of the delightful climate and attractions of the Golden state:

Riverside, Cal., November 5, 1902.—My Dear Old Friend: According to promise I will write you a few lines to let you know what kind of a country this is and how everything is. First I will say to you that this is certainly the finest climate in the world as it is now pleasant enough for the men to be wearing straw hats and light summer clothes. Ladies are wearing white dresses and you have no use for overcoat or umbrella. It looks like the whole face of the earth is covered with rich roses and fragrant flowers of all descriptions. Anyway you look your gaze is met by all kinds of fruit, such as oranges, lemons, limes, figs, olives, prunes, grapes, English walnuts and lots of other fruits too numerous to mention. We are eating all kinds of nice vegetables, and, as you will see by the slip I send you, there is just lots of building going on and it is not exaggerated one bit for I was in Los Angeles last week two days and I will truthfully say that I never saw as much building going on in one city in my life.

The city of Riverside covers an area of 52 square miles. It has a splendid street car system running out eight miles and good electric lights, fine schools and lots of churches and a hundred and sixty-five thousand dollar hotel under construction and a court house that will cost one hundred thousand dollars and not a saloon in the city nor a blind tiger, and I have not seen a drunken man since I have been here. The stores are closed all day Sunday. Our journey here was a long and tiresome one, but I enjoyed it as we saw so many grand sights along the route, especially after we left Denver.

Of course you may not be interested in this, for perhaps you have witnessed those sights yourself, but nevertheless will try to describe some of them to you. First came the Palmer lake, a beautiful lake some 18 or 20 feet deep fed by a stream spouting up out of the earth 10 or 15 feet high and so clear you could see the bottom as far out as you see. Next was the Elephant rock, a rock of enormous size and the exact image of an elephant; next was a natural tunnel through the mountain. The monument park, this being rocks in the side of the mountain, giving the appearance of all kinds of different shaped monuments, then came Pike's Peak, which as you know stands 14,000 feet high and covered with snow; next came the Garden of the Gods, consisting of the forms of almost all kinds of animals on the sides of the mountains of solid rock. Next came the Rocky mountains, then came what I consider the grandest sights of them, going through the Royal gorge, the rocky cliffs towering above us on either side three to four thousand feet, with just enough room for our train and lots of points we could see both ends of our train with two big engines pulling me at the rate of 50 miles an hour. You bet it looked scary. Next we came to the great Salt Lake City, saw the fine Mormon Temple and magnificent structures with every street of the city starting out from the Temple, next the Salt Lake. Next we crossed summits of the Sierra Nevada mountains which as you know are 7,000 feet high and they are covered with six inches of snow and it was still snowing; next we passed along the edge of the Great Blue Canyon for about 50 miles, it being 4,000 feet right straight down below us, which looked very dangerous, and a great many other grand sights which will not tax your patience to describe.

This is certainly a great country, but none so dear to me as old Kentucky and my many friends in Paducah. I expect to be back by the 20th inst., but my wife will stay longer; so give all the boys and all my friends my best and accept my best wishes. Your friend,

From the field to your breakfast table, the story of Quaker Oats is a story of being different.

The grain difference is only the first.

Step by step, day by day, we will show why Quaker Oats is the best food.

It is best because it is different—at every point where difference counts.

HALL CAINE SICK

HE WAS UNABLE TO MEET CARDINAL GIBBONS.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 11—Hall Caine the author, who yesterday was stricken ill at the Stafford hotel here, was somewhat improved tonight, and it is said he may be able to get to New York tomorrow, although the physicians advise him to rest here for a few days. Mr. Caine is suffering from a severe cold and intense nervousness. He is completely fagged out from overwork. All last week during the engagement here of the company producing his play, The Eternal City, Mr. Caine was ailing and was compelled to keep to his apartments most of the time. For this reason he was unable to keep an engagement made to meet Cardinal Gibbons.

A DANGEROUS MONTH.

This is the month of coughs, colds and acute catarrh. Do you catch cold easily? Find yourself hoarse, with a tickling in your throat and an annoying cough at night? Then you should always have handy a bottle of Ballard's Horchond Syrup. J. A. Anderson, 384 West Fifth St., Salt Lake City, writes: "We use Ballard's Horchond Syrup for coughs and colds. It gives immediate relief. We know it's the best remedy for these troubles. I write this to induce other people to try this pleasant and efficient remedy." 25c, 50c and $1 at DuBois, Kolb and Co.

ATROPIES OF HOONAH INDIANS IN TRYING TO DRIVE OUT DEMON.

Tacoma, Wash., Nov. 11—Dispatches from Skagway and Juneau give brief details of a horrible example of witchcraft and superstition in the Hoonah Indian village, 40 miles distant from Juneau. Though quiet and peaceful, the Hoonah Indians are very superstitious, and nearly every year one or more members suffer violent deaths. Several days ago the Indians took a man who was believed to be possessed of the devil and made him the victim of frightful atrocities. His ears were cut off and his body frightfully hacked in an unsuccessful effort to drive out the demon. The victim was tormented with epileptic fits, which continued. He was finally buried alive in the earth and his scalp cut off inch by inch. Officers have hurried to the scene from Juneau on a special steamer.

DIED IN THE PULPIT.

REV. W. R. RUNYAN STRICKEN AT NEW RICHMOND, OHIO.

New Richmond, Ohio, Nov. 11—While preaching at the Methodist church here Rev. W. R. Runyan, D. D., presiding elder of the Georgetown district, was suddenly stricken with heart disease and died almost instantaneously.

Shortly after Dr. Runyan had begun his sermon, the second of the day at the same church, he faltered and fell at the foot of the pulpit. A number of persons rushed to the elder's assistance, but almost before they reached him life was extinct. He was about 65 years of age.

TO REPLACE FRIARS.

AMERICANS INSTEAD OF SPANISH, IS THE VATICAN'S DECISION.

Rome, Nov. 10—The real nature of the provision made by the vatican for the solution of the problem of the friars in the Philippines has been ascertained. The vatican has made up its mind not to banish the friars now, or in any given time, but has instructed the heads of the four religious orders concerned, advising them to replace gradually all the Spanish friars on the islands by others of different nationalities, especially Americans, where possible.

The firm conviction is entertained by many church authorities that the opposition to the Spanish friars will pass away in a few years.

I. M. Mooney, Greenville, Tex., writes, Nov. 2, 1900: "I had rheumatism last winter, was down in bed six weeks; tried everything, but got no relief till a friend gave me a part of a bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment. I used it, and got two more bottles. It cured me and I haven't felt any rheumatism since. I can recommend Snow Liniment to be the best liniment on earth for rheumatism." HE FOUND HIS PRISONER AND
SOME OTHER THINGS
YESTERDAY.

Jailer Fayette Jones is still looking for Ellen Parker, the negro who escaped from the hospital ward of the county jail several days ago. She was in for stealing from Mr. B. B. Brundren, the druggist, and while no one was looking, she had escaped away from the jail.

Several days afterwards she was caught in Metropolis, but when the officer arrived he found that the officers had released her. She went to reside with her mother near Brookport, and the officer learning of it, went down after her yesterday.

She was found at a house in the neighborhood where she had sought refuge and wanted to go home to sit on her hat. Jailer Jones had worn out a warrant against her for being a fugitive from justice and was a constable was with him.

At the house, however, the girl's brother appeared on the scene with a shotgun and pistol, and while the constable was looking after the prisoner, the brother was fighting Jailer Jones, who finally, to cap the climax of his bad luck, fell through the floor of the porch by the breaking of a rotten timber. The negro then went for him in earnest, the jailer being half and half through the porch and helpless when the constable rushed to his rescue. The woman ran and escaped, and Jailer Jones returned empty handed. He fortunately escaped without a

"I remained after Generals Corbin and Young," said General Wood, "in order to visit Scotland with my family. The generals and myself were treated very kindly both in Germany and in England. We were granted every facility for seeing the workings of the military systems and have seen many things which were not only interesting and instructive, but will be useful if adopted in this country."

General Wood was asked whether he is in favor of establishing the canteen in the army. He replied:

"My canteen reports are on file. General Funston has come out strongly for the canteen, did he not? I think we are all of one opinion on that subject." General Wood went direct to Washington.

It is hard to say new things about Doan's Kidney Pills. They cure the lame and aching back, the sufferer from kidney disorders and the troubles of those whose urinary organism is wrong in its action. That they do this is so easy to prove that not a vestige of doubt remains. Public endorsement of local citizens is easily proven. Read this case:

Mr. H. L. Blackford of 615 Washington street, carpenter by trade, says: "It struck me when reading a notice about Doan's Kidney Pills that if they performed half what they promised they might cure my kidney complaint, which annoyed me in the shape of backache. I went to Dr. Bois and Co.'s drug store, got a box and commenced the treatment. If it had not benefited me I never would have bought a second, and if the second had not brought undoubted results I could not be induced to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to friends and acquaintances personally, much less publicly."

A MATTER OF DIPLOMACY

[Original]

Just before the Spanish-American war a cablegram was received in Washington that France was about completing a treaty of alliance between certain powers possessing sufficient united navies to hold the United States fleet in check, giving Spain their influence and leaving her free access to Cuba. After consultation between the president and the cabinet a reply was sent, but what its nature was has never been forthcoming. What is known is that one of the ablest American diplomats then abroad was instructed to use every effort to defeat the treaty, offering England certain coveted support in case she should forbid the interference. The difficulty in this way was a want of time. The treaty was in Paris and had been signed by all the powers concerned except Germany.

One evening a talented and energetic young Spanish diplomat, whom we shall call Cavallos, took the evening train from Paris to Brussels. He had with him a leather suit case, which he kept between his heels and the bottom of his seat. Opposite him sat a lady, leaning her head back on the cushion impulsively and wearing a thick veil. When the train reached Amiens, she uncovered her face, which proved to be young and attractive, though very pale, and looking appenningly at Cavallos, she asked in French if he would have the kindness to go into the station and bring her a glass of water. Cavallos hesitated a moment. Then, taking up the suit case, he sprang from the coach and returned with the water, never loosening his grip on the case during the trip.

"Thank you ever so much, monsieur," said the lady. "I would have shown my appreciation of your kindness by at least taking charge of your suit case had you permitted me."

"It is not heavy," replied Cavallos, "and there is nothing in it but a few toilet articles."

The lady leaned her head back impulsively on the cushion and covered her face with her handkerchief.

"Is madame suffering?" asked Cavallos.

"Frightfully. I have been suffering in the face."

"Too bad," replied the sympathetic Cavallos. "I wish I had something with me to alleviate it."

"There is only one thing that will relieve it, a preparation of chloroform and camphor, but I don't like to use it in a public coach. It has such an odor."

There were two ladies in the coach besides the speaker and Cavallos. All agreed that they would endure the odor of the drug if it would save suffering. The invalid demurred for a time, but the agony became so great that she was disturbing the other passengers as well as paining them at seeing her suffer, and she at last consented. The drug was certainly odoriferous, so much so that at the next station the two ladies got into another carriage.

"I beg of you," said the invalid to Cavallos, "don't stay here for fear of being considered unsympathetic. I shall not blame you if you leave."

Cavallos hesitated. He would have preferred to leave, but he was a giant fellow and did not care to appear selfish.

"You would be alone, madame."

At that moment the lady became faint from pain, and before she could recover to make a reply the train had started.

It was some time before there was another stop. The lady took a vii from her pocket and applied it frequently to her nostrils. Cavallos began to get drowsy.

"Would you mind having the window raised?" he asked.

"Oh, please do it!" pleaded the lady. "The cold air blowing on my face would kill me."

Cavallos' head began to swim. Then the lady looked to him far away. Outside the scenery, instead of going backward, as it seems to one moving rapidly forward, revolved. The diplomat's chiro sank on his breast. He was unconscious.

"Come," said the guard an hour later, poking his head into the door. "Waken up. We are at Brussels."

Cavallos slowly came to himself. He did not feel his suit case at his heels. He looked down. It was gone. So was the invalid.

That same night an American gentleman of distinguished bearing crossed the English channel from Boulogne to Folkestone, arriving at London in the morning. Without breakfast he hurried to the home of the foreign minister, called him from his breakfast and was closeted with him for half an hour. The two then departed for the foreign office. In the afternoon cables were sent to the British ambassadors on the continent that England would resent any interference in the Spanish-American imbroglio.

At the defense of Santiago a Spanish soldier distinguished himself in every action. Indeed he so constantly and recklessly exposed himself that his comrades at last suspected that he was trying to get himself killed. A few days before the surrender a sharpshooter in blue, who had been watching him for some time, but who had not been in a position to reach him, suddenly found him within range. There was a crack of a rifle, and the Spaniard fell. When, some days later, his effects were gone over preparatory Democracy.

The Memphis police have inaugurated a crusade against vagrants and suspicious characters of all colors and descriptions, and the slogan is, "Go to work or leave town." Paducah ought to try that. There are enough idle negroes on some of the corners here to operate every steamboat between Evansville and Cairo, and yet all the packets are delayed daily because they can't get labor at any price.

The Kentucky Exhibit Association means business and the character and ability of the men who are at the head of it, and are working constantly to make it a success. Insure a sensible exhibit for Kosciusko, one of the best states in the union. At Louisville, the headquarters much good work is being done every day and some of the best workers in the state have espoused the cause with a zeal and earnestness that indicates the acme of success.

The salaried grabbers in the city council will probably have an opportunity shortly to get in their graft good and strong. Thus far they have not collected a great deal for called meetings of the council, but the revised ordinances have to be adopted and they all have to be read twice before they can become law. This will require a number of called meetings, and the connoisseurs will each get $3 for every meeting, which they are not lawfully entitled to, but which makes no difference to them. They need the money.

The Democratic party in Kentucky bids fair soon to be disrupted again. The question that is now agitating the minds of the rank and file, the office hunters and the press, is whether to hold a primary or a convention to make the nominations for state officers next year, and whether to hold it early or late. It appears to the casual observer that in Beckham the other gubernatorial candidates recognize a formidable opponent, if not a sure winner. He has built up a machine that in the event of a convention probably means his nomination, and one reason the supporters of the other candidates urge against his nomination is that "the Republicans want him to run, and that he is ineligible. He will probably run nevertheless, however. You can find a little alleged law in Kentucky for most everything these days, from holding two offices and having salaries increased while in office, to the wholesale stealing of state offices, and Beckham will probably find enough law to enable him to run and get the nomination. When he does it means more trouble in the party, something like the Music Hall convention meant.

There seems to be no way to avoid it, as both sides want to have their own way, and both cannot do it. The Republican outlook is very bright in Kentucky.

IMPORTANT WITNESSES ARE AFRAID TO GO TO JACK-SON, KY.

Lexington, Nov. 11—Two of the most sensational affidavits ever filed in a Kentucky court have just been placed on record at Jackson, Breathitt county. That county is the scene of the Hargis-Cookrell feud, and within its borders thirty men have been killed during the past year. A number were assassinated and are credited to one or the other of the factions, while several men are exiled from the country because of their fear of assassination. The affidavits are by Attorney J. B. Marcus and Moses Feitner, his client, accused of the killing of Jesse Fields. The purpose of the affidavits is to secure a continuance in the case of Feitner. They follow on the heels of sensational statements contained in a letter written to Circuit Judge Redwine of Breathitt by John Patrick, an exile living in this city, in which he said he knew who killed James Cookrell, being an eye witness, but declines to return to Jackson to testify unless the governor will send a company of militia to protect him, alleging that a deputy sheriff attempted to assassinate him and that the persons who desire his death will kill him if he returns without the protection of troops.

In his affidavit Moses Feitner tells in detail of alleged plots to kill Attorney J. B. Marcus. . . .

FORTUNE HUNTERS

Princes Who Want to Trade Their Titles, in Hot Water.

A Number of Them Coming into Some Very Unpleasant Notoriety.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 11—The Chronicle prints a remarkable story, substantiated by documents, of a bargain entered into three years ago by Prince Hugo von Hohenlohe of Germany, nephew of the late chancellor, with an agent in London, by which he agreed to pay £2,000 for securing consideration of his proposal of marriage to Miss May Goetz, who objected to his age. The agent was Capt. Ladestas de Porkony.

Porkony employed Lucine O'Brien, a London solicitor, as his assistant, and it is through O'Brien, now in California on business, that the matter has come to light.

Capt. Porkony arranged with two leading society ladies of London to get Hohenlohe's proposal to Mrs. Goetz. The result may be seen in this letter:

Belgrave Square (S. W.), January 17, 1899—Dear Sir: I saw Mrs. Goetz yesterday and she begged me to say how flattered she felt at the proposal with regard to Prince Hohenlohe, but that her daughter was still very young, and as she had never seen him she must decline the proposal. Should they meet hereafter it would be a different matter, but without any personal knowledge on either side the thing would be impossible. Miss Goetz is a charming girl in every way, but she is very English in her feelings and views and dislikes the "marriage of convenience" system abroad extremely. I do not think she will ever marry unless she falls in love with a man. Yours very faithfully,

Three other titled clients of Capt. Porkony, who wished to exchange their names for good American coin, were Baron Richard von Kappers, Baron Everhard von Dnneckleman, and Prince Heinrich Haron.

GOOD SHAPE

This is the Way Paducah Factories are Found.

Sanitary Condition of All Inspected
Thus Far Is Very Good.

State Inspector Ludwig, who began work in the city yesterday, finds the factories of Paducah in excellent shape, both as to sanitation and compliance with the laws. He yesterday inspected the Cohnauks company,
Forked Deer Pants Co., Banar's pottery, Forked Deer Tobacco company and the Famous Pants factory and found them satisfactory.

He found only one child under 14 years of age working unlawfully, and that was in Banar's pottery and was employed to help one of the employees and not employed by the proprietor.

In the Cohnauks company were found a number, but they all had the consent of the county judge, and all that was not exactly regular was that their parents did not certify to the papers, which they will do at once.

It is not the policy of the inspector to prosecute proprietors whom he finds have violated the law in this respect until it is certain that they intended to. He usually notifies them, and if they do not comply with the law in a day or two, then he issues a warrant.

SMALL COINS WANTED

Holiday Trade Will Create a Great Demand for Them.

Believed There Should be No Limit to Subsidiary Coinage.

Washington, Nov. 11—The merchants of the nation are clamoring for small change. The Christmas trade will be on in a week or so, and the applications for small coins are piling up upon the country's sub-treasuries. The amount is limited and there is apparently no way of meeting the demand.

In his recommendations for legislation affecting the mints of the United States Director Roberts will urge strongly that congress remove the limit upon the amount of subsidiary silver coin that may be put out by the mint. Under the law as it stands present the total stock of subsidiary coin is limited to $100,000,000. Of this amount there remains in the treasury and in the sub-treasuries only about $7,000,000. The country has absorbed the balance of the $100,000,000 that has been coined and the retail business interests are apt to be seriously cramped for small coins during the holiday trade of this year.

Director Roberts believes that there should be no limit upon the amount of subsidiary coinage that may be prepared by the mints. If coined the money will remain in the treasury until the business of the country needs it, because it cannot be forced out into circulation by the treasury and will go out only where there is a demand for it. On the other hand, when the demand falls off the coins are returned to the treasury by the banks, so that the circulation of subsidiary coins is automatic.

POLICE COURT

A Shooting Affray Was Partially Investigated Today.

Alleged Whiskey Thieves Held for Housebreaking Today.

Last night Ed Lydon, Pat Moore and Henry Beckman had a free-for-all fight near Eleventh and Caldwell streets, in which Beckman alleges he was struck by Lydon. In the fight Moore started out to run and get away from the fighters and was mistaken by Beckman for Lydon and several shots were sent after his fleeing form by Beckman. Beckman was arraigned this morning for malicious shooting without wounding, breach of ordinance for shooting in the city limits, and for breach of the peace, while the other two were arraigned for breach of the peace only. It seems from the evidence that Lydon struck Beckman with a bottle and Beckman in turn pulled his pistol and in his confusion mistook Moore for Lydon and began to shoot. Lydon was fined $20 and costs and the warrants against Beckman and Moore for a breach of the peace were dismissed. The cases charging malicious shooting and breach of ordinance against Beckman were continued.

Pete Ross, colored, was fined $5 and costs for sleeping on a market bench.

Ruth Ray, colored, pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct in a dance hall and was fined $10 and costs.

The case against Bud Allgood, white, who threatened to beat a companion, was continued.

The breach of the peace case against Fannie Jordan, a negro, was continued.

Sid Aubrey, Will Young and Jimmie

Forte, the white man who stole twelve quarts of whisky from the wharf boat, were held to answer for housebreaking, and the bonds of the former two fixed at $300 and of the latter at $100.

"I HAVE YOUR PROMISE!" SAID HE.

MY FELLOW PASSENGER

[Original]

I had met during my sojourn abroad, where I was attending lectures at a German university, Miss Mollie Arnold, a fellow countrywoman, and had become engaged to her. She was traveling with her aunt. She was now in London, where she had gone to meet her parents, who were coming from America. I was to join her there and receive their inspection.

Crossing the channel at Calais, I took the train at Dover for London. I had become an inveterate smoker among the Germans and was much pleased to find the compartment I entered entirely unoccupied, so I read and smoked till we stopped at a station not far from London, when a gentleman got in the compartment with me and at once began to snuff the air unceasingly and let down the windows. Irritated at being thus disturbed, I stuck on.

"Pardon me," he said. "Is this a smoking carriage?"

Now, at the university I had learned all sorts of queer methods of hoodwinking and browbeating and otherwise getting the better of people. The German student is a reckless, good-humored, thoughtless individual, who never stops at any daring method of attaining his ends. It occurred to me to frighten the man into leaving the carriage, so that I could smoke on undisturbed. Without heeding his question I glared at him. Then, leaning back in the cushions, I began to mumble incoherently. The gentleman looked at me inquiringly for a few moments, then unfolded a paper and began to read. When his ticket was taken, he whispered something to the conductor, who looked at me sharply, then said:

"Very well, sir. I'll put you in another compartment at the next station."

Much pleased with the success of my maneuver, I smoked on, expecting soon to be relieved entirely of one so narrow minded as to object to that smoke which I had come to consider as natural an element for man to breathe as the air of heaven.

When we reached the next station, the guard appeared at the door, accompanied by two policemen, who got into the carriage and without a word of explanation proceeded to handcuff me.

"It's the man," said one; "tailles to the description excellently."

"When did he escape?" asked my fellow passenger.

"Last night, sir. The keepers havin' been lookin' for 'im hevverwhere," said I. I was taken from the carriage, leaving the compartment to the gentleman who did not smoke and whom I observed as I was led away setting himself to his paper with as much composure as if nothing had happened. I was taken to a third class carriage, where I could breathe not only smoke, but garlic and onions, to my heart's content.

When we arrived at London, I was landed in an insane asylum, where it was discovered that on an error had been made in mistaking me for an inmate who had escaped the night before. Nevertheless it was two days before I could convince the medical attendants that I was a sane man. Then I was discharged, went to my hotel, dressed and proceeded to call upon my fiancee and her family.

On the way I thought over a number of nice speeches to be made to Mrs. Arnold, bringing in how agreeably surprised I was to find her so much younger looking than I expected, just the mother for Clerk Dan McFadden Receives a Marriage of Miss Emma Kirchoff Tonight in Paducah.

Found It Was Footgear From a Tramp He Had Befriended.

Clerk Dan McFadden, who is known to every one who ever calls at the general delivery window at the post office, is an easy mark for men with hard luck stories, and they often ask him for assistance. He often helps them, but the first time he ever received any evidence of gratitude on part of these he befriended was today, when he received through the mail a peculiar looking package, addressed to "Mr. McFadden, Paducah postoffice."

When he opened it he found that it contained a handsome pair of moccasins, copiously adorned with beads and artistic little flaps and things. With it were some peculiar looking feathered ornaments, which Clerk McFadden thinks must be to adorn the legs. At any rate when he does his sports new possessions, he will wear them there.

In the package was the following note, scrawled on rough paper:

"Son City, November 5.
Mr. McFadden, Paducah postoffice, from Jack Rosin, who you gave a quarter to get a meal with, many thanks."

Clerk McFadden infers that the man lives in Sioux City, Ia., and was grateful enough for the quarter to send him the moccasins.

He remembers one man who about six months ago asked him for a dollar and in whom he gave a quarter, thinking he was a common hero. The man asked the clerk his name and that is the last heard of him until today.

WAS FOUND DEAD.

BOB EDWARDS HAD BEEN ILL AND DIED OF DISEASE.

Bob Edwards, colored, aged about 33, was found dead in his bed this morning by neighbors who had called to see how he was getting along.

Edwards had been ill for some time and nobody sat up with him last night. This morning when friends called he was found dead. Coroner William Peal was summoned and decided that death was from natural causes. Edwards was well known in police circles, having been before Judge Sanders several times on minor charges. He lived in an alley in the rear of Mr. John Dean's residence on Clay street near Fifth.

CARD OF THANKS.

I wish to thank my friends for the many kindnesses shown me in my recent bereavement and assure them of my sincere appreciation of them.

Arms and The Woman

My mail since leaving the Journalistic field had become so small that to receive a letter was an event. Inside of the envelope I discovered only six words, but they meant all the world to me. "She is here at the Inn." It was unsigned. I waved the slip of paper before Pembroke's eyes.

"She is found!" I cried.

"Then go in search of her," he said. "And you will go with me?"

"Not I! I prefer tigers to princesses. By the way, here is an article in the Zeitung on the coming coronation of her serene highness the Princess Elizabeth of Hohenphalha. I'm afraid that I shan't be present to witness the event." He thrust the paper into my hands and approached the window, out of which he leaned and stared at the garden flowers below. "When I asked her why it could not be, she answered that she had no love to give in return for mine."

"And was all this fair to her?" asked Gretchen coldly.

"To her? I do not understand." "I mean, was all this fair to my sister?"

"Gretchen," a light piercing the darkness, "has she not written to you?"

"A long time ago. She wanted to see me on an important matter, but I could not change my plans at the time. I shall see her at the palace next week. Ought you not to be with her instead of here?"

"Why should I be with her?"

Gretchen laughed, but the key was false.

"Are you not going to marry her? Surely it is easy after the king has given his permission. Have you already fallen out of love with her after all your efforts to make her a princess? Truly man is as unstable as sand and water. Ah, but you fooled us all to the top of your bent. You knew from the first that she was a princess, but you could not find the proofs. Hermann and I were the means to the end. But who shall blame you? Not I. I am very grateful to you for having given to me a sister. And if you fooled me I returned measure for measure. It is game and quit. Time hangs heavy on my hands, and the victory, however short, was amusing."

"I never loved her!" I cried. Where were the words I needed?

"So much the worse for you," drawled. "But here comes Hermann to announce your supper."

"I shall not break the bread of hospitality," said I in the bitterness of my despair. I gathered up my traps and then I let them tumble back. The used words come with a rush to my lips. I went close to her. "Why did you humiliate yourself in begging my life of the prince? Why if my life was nothing to you?" Answer. Why did you stoop to your knees to that man if I was worthless to you? Why?"

Her cheeks grew red, then white. Her lips formed words which she could not speak.

"Herr Whidbey's supper is ready," announced the innkeeper.

"Go and eat it!" I said childishly.

"Your appetite is gone then?" imperiously.

"Yes, and get you gone with it!"

The innkeeper surveyed for a space. "Will you kindly tell me from whom you received the information that her highness was at the inn?"

I produced the unsigned letter. He read it carefully, while Gretchen looked on nervously.

"Ach," said the innkeeper, "that Stahlberg! He shall be dismissed."

Unhappily for him that individual was just passing along the corridor. The innkeeper signified him to approach.

"How dared you?" began the innkeeper, thrusting the letter under Stahlberg's nose.

"Dare? I? Herr," said the big fellow, "I do not understand. What is it you accuse me of?"

"This!" cried the innkeeper. "You have written to Herr Whidbey and told him that her highness was at the inn. And you were expressly forbidden to do so."

Stahlberg looked around blankly. "I swear to heaven, here!"

"Do not prevaricate," the innkeeper interrupted. "You know that you wrote this."

"Stahlberg!" I cried excitedly. "Tell me why you wrote this note to me and I'll see that you are taken care of the rest of your days."

"I forbid him!" commanded Gretchen in alarm.

"As God hears me, here," said Stahlberg stoutly. "I wrote not a line to you or to any one."

"Oh!" cried the innkeeper, stamping. "And you deny that you have written here that you saw her highness to the garden three nights ago?"

Gretchen was beginning to grow terribly for some reason. I myself was filled with wonder, knowing well enough that nothing about a garden had been written in the note I had received.

"You have been looking for us?" she asked in even tones. "Why have you?"

Vaguely I gazed at her, at the innkeeper, then at my traps in the corner. It was apparent that I was an intruder. I struck my forehead in anger and despair. Triple fool that I was! I was nothing to her. She had told me so, and I had not believed.

"Yes; why?" asked the innkeeper.

Gretchen was beginning to grow terribly for some reason. I myself was filled with wonder, knowing well enough that nothing about a garden had been written in the note I had received.

"And so you really love me?" I asked.

"I do."

"Why do you love me?"

"Because," said Gretchen.

pushed "M" from the room, following him swiftly, and the door closed noiselessly behind them.

My heart was in flames. I understood all now, though I dare say Gretchen didn't. All at once her head fell on the back of the chair from which she had but lately risen. She was weeping still, and I deeply. I did not move, but stood watching her, drinking in with exultation the loveliness of a woman in tears. She was mine, mine, mine! The innkeeper had not really known her heart till the night in the garden to which he so adroitly referred. Then he had made up his mind that things were not as they should be and had sent me that anonymous note mine at last, I thought. Somehow for the first time in my life I felt what is called monster—that is to say, not all heaven and earth should take her away from me now. Softly I passed over to her side and knelt at her feet. I lifted the hem of her gown and pressed it to my lips.

"My princess," I murmured; "all mine." I kissed her unwilling hand. Then I rose and put my arms around her. She trembled, but made no effort to withdraw. I swear to you, Gretchen, that I will never leave you again, not if the king should send an army against me, which he will never do, since he has commanded that I marry you.

""My princess," I murmured; "all mine."

Observations taken at 7 a. m. River 2.0 on the gauge, no change in last 24 hours. Wind south, a light breeze. Weather clear and warmer. Temperature 60. Pell, Observer.

The steamer Robert E. Linehan, of La Crosse, Wis., has arrived here and will go into some trade shortly. The boat was purchased recently by Captains O. Bauer and J. R. Karnes, and is 130 feet long with a 24 foot beam. The owners have not yet decided into what trade to go and it is said that the most favorable mentioned trade is the Golconda and Paducah. This however was denied this morning and Captain Bauer said that he intended to enter a boat into that trade but would probably not do so until spring. "We are figuring on a new boat for this trade," he said, "and will probably enter it in the spring." The Linehan is now at the foot of Jones street laying up and is suitable for either a packet or towing.

Captain "Shep" Green, formerly on the Dick Clyde, is en route to Paducah with boat which he will enter in the Cumberland river trade. The name of the boat is the "Henrietta," of Omaha, Neb., and is not yet out of the Missouri river. Eight hundred miles remains yet to be traversed by the boat before Paducah is reached, and already the craft has been en route three weeks. This boat will be immediately entered into the Cumberland trade in opposition to Captain Tom Ryman. The boat is 130 feet long with a 26 foot beam.

The Pittsburgh Gazette says: "Four new two inch chains will be put in the new towboat Sprague, which is still at New Orleans, and according to information from that city the boat will not leave there for at least six weeks. Superintendent Bronson, of the Iowa Iron Works company, the builders of the boat, has left New Orleans for Dn. huque, Ia. When he left New Orleans Mr. Bronson stated that the boat had passed out of the hands of his company to the Monongahela Coal and Coke company. Officials of the latter concern deny that the company has taken the boat out of the hands of the builders. In any event, Mr. Bronson stated that he did not leave the boat for the purpose of making new chains for her. He took all of his men with him and the crew of the Sprague with few exceptions, were sent to their homes. Owing to the scarcity of iron, it is said that it will take some time before the chains can be made for the boat. The boat is lying in landing at New Orleans, and it is said will remain there until such time as conditions warrant her being placed back on the docks. Captain James G. Beauford is in charge. One of the chains which broke last week has been repaired, and work is well under way on the other one. The four new chains contemplated will give the steamer a total of six chains, which it is hoped will hold the immense strain of the boat's head and stern."

After making the trip from New York City up the Atlantic to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, thence through St. Lawrence river, Lake Ontario, Welland canal, Lake Erie, Lake Huron, Lake Michigan, the Chicago drainage canal, Illinois river, then down the Mississippi, the yacht Coro arrived at Memphis Thursday en route to New Orleans.

The William Towle is again laying up for repairs. She started out Saturday on a trip, after having completed extensive repairs and had not gone far before she "ran through herself," and one cylinder was blown out. She will be laid up for some time as a result.
